According to a public survey conducted by Angus Reid Institute in 2017, women and gender diverse people, particularly those living at multiple intersections of oppression, face increased risks of being targeted by online hate. Join this informative webinar to build required skills and resources to address hate speech online effectively.

In this webinar you will learn about:

- Recognizing and understanding hate speech and extremism.
- Understanding counter-speech and counter-narratives.
- How to respond individually and collectively engage in counter speech online.

This webinar is offered in collaboration with The Canadian Council of Muslim Women (CCMW).

Participants will require access to a computer with camera and internet connection.*
